

Catullus 16

1. Pēdicābō ego vōs et irrumābō, (12)
2. Aurēlī pathice et cinaede Fūrī, (12)
3. quī mē ex versiculīs meīs putāstis, (12)
4. quod sunt molliculī, parum pudīcum. (11)
5. Nam castum esse decet pium poētam (12)
6. ipsum, versiculōs nihil necesse est; (12)
7. quī tum dēnique habent salem ac lepōrem, (13)
8. sī sint molliculī ac parum pudīcī (12)
9. et quod prūriat incitāre possunt, (11)
10. nōn dīcō puerīs, sed hīs pilōsīs (11)
11. quī dūrōs nequeunt movēre lumbōs. (11)
12. Vōs, quod mīlia multa bāsiōrum (11)
13. lēgistis male mē marem putātis? (11)
14. Pēdicābō ego vōs et irrumābō. (12)

1. I'll butt-fuck you both, and stick my dick in your mouths, (12)
2. whore Aurelius and pleasure boy Furius, (12)
3. you, who impute to me, from my verse, that I be (12)
4. soft and tender, and a little immodest. (11)
5. It is proper that a pious poet be pure (12)
6. himself, but that his verse be decidedly not. (12)
7. In point of fact, they do have a certain wit and charm, (13)
8. though they be tender and a little immodest, (12)
9. and can arouse an incipient tingle, (11)
10. I speak not of boys, but of hairy old men (11)
11. no longer able to stir an erection. (11)
12. You, having read many thousands of kisses, (11)
13. therefore condescend to hold my manhood weak? (11)
14. I'll butt-fuck you both, and stick my dick in your mouths. (12)
